Person Centered Thinking
Online Workshop

Person Centered Thinking workshops are about much more than information recall. They are about understanding, practicing, and experiencing new person-centered perspectives, deepening knowledge, and refining skills in a meaningful and relevant way. Now there is an online version available.

Live online training offers a way to learn via the Zoom video-conference software. The online, Instructor-Led workshop gives learners the opportunity to actively participate in their learning. This is done through activities like brainstorming and communicating through chat, problem-solving, role-playing, partner activity and small group discussion. This modular, online version is segmented into six (6) three-hour sessions. They are scheduled over a two-week period with one module each day.

What do I receive when I register?

The workshop involves eighteen (18) hours of engagement with a workbook and activity sheets available through a shared file system. The workbook has information covered in the course and examples of how the skills have been applied with others. Soon after registering you receive an invitation to join a Google Classroom for the workshop where additional resources for study are made available to you and you can connect with others.

After registering, you will be sent a PCT Workbook file along with instruction on how and when to login to the workshop. You will also receive an Agenda Packet prior to each session with Activity Sheets and reference to the PCT Workbook so that you can read ahead and prepare.

Each online, Instructor-Led training will be facilitated by a Firstperson Services credentialled instructor and may include other members of The Learning Community for Person Centered Practices.

What equipment and software do I need in order to attend an online course?

There are no special requirements. All you need to attend is:
